Misleading Attacks on Social Security

Misleading attacks from so-called "budget hawks" claim cuts to Social Security will help to balance our Federal budget and decrease the deficit. Social Security does not contribute to the country's debt or deficit, because it isn't part of the Federal budget. Social Security is a self-funded, self-sustaining program that millions of people rely on for their stable retirement and disability income.

Medicare is Essential to Protecting YOUR Healthcare

Medicare funds community health centers that treat everyone--infants through seniors. Teaching hospitals rely on funding from Medicare to support their intern programs that train doctors for the future. Medicare funds dialysis centers and other health care facilities that treat people of all ages and incomes. We must demand Congress improve and expand--not cut--Medicare.

Faces of Medicaid: Americans of Every Background

Many seniors in nursing homes rely on Medicaid to pay for their treatment. Chronically-ill children receive life-saving care through Medicaid. Without the medicine, therapy, and hospitalization services Medicaid provides, children, young adults, and older Americans will die.

Grim Prognosis if Proposed Cuts Go Through

What will America look like if we no longer educate new doctors? How quickly will disease spread if there are fewer or no local health providers? If these proposed cuts go through, everyone's health will suffer.
